Embracing the Unpredictable: Moving Ahead Through Today's Financial Markets

By John Furlow, Executive Vice President

I wonder if Shining Crystal Imports and Exports will give me a full refund on my defective crystal ball? If only we all had a crystal ball that predicted the first half of 2020. Twelve weeks ago no crystal ball would have foreseen these unpredictable markets. Or that these tenuous markets would be combined with the cultural upheaval of those seeking social reform. And this isn't even including the the international oil situation or the political environment in which we find ourselves.

Historical data shows that the normal time for a market wind-down and restart takes months if not years. In 2020 it has taken weeks. The month of March downturn affected the first quarter returns adversely while the positive rebound during the second quarter helped overall returns. We are still seeing daily large market swings.

The TPF Balanced Fund provided a nice rebound of +15.2% for the quarter outperforming both the Lipper MATA Index and the Blended Fund Index.

The crystal ball got the expectation of volatility correct. That is why TPF's strategic diversified use of best-in-class active investment managers has added value to our Partners' portfolios. TPF continues to add valuable long-term relative performance. The TPF Balanced Fund provided a nice rebound of +15.2% for the quarter, outperforming both the Lipper MATA Index and the Blended Fund Index. It look like the crystal ball sees more uncertainty ahead, which will result in more volatility the rest of the year.

Impact and Inspiration: Presbyterian Night Shelter: Even Now, Accelerating the Journey Home

The largest provider of services to those experiencing homelessness, the Presbyterian Night Shelter has worked tirelessly to eliminate the cycle of homelessness in Tarrant County since 1984. Originally started by a group of Presbyterian churches as an overnight shelter for men, women, and children experiencing homelessness, they continue to provide emergency overnight shelter for ANYONE who needs a place to sleep, but they are also just as focused on helping each of their guests find sustainable housing.

Because (especially now) everyone needs - and deserves - a home.

Like other similar organizations throughout our country, Presbyterian Night Shelter is currently navigating uncharted waters while they aggressively work to mitigate the effects of this pandemic. And it's not always easy.

However, don't despair, there's good news too! Their guests remain healthy as the one identified case was quickly identified and isolated. Also good news, Presbyterian Night Shelter has experienced a surprising increase in donations, even receiving some donations in the form of stimulus checks. Since the start of this pandemic, they have seen an increased need for lunches, and thanks to the increased generosity of companies and individuals, they have been able to step up and meet this demand. Additionally, as social distancing made space an issue, the City of Fort Worth opened an overflow shelter at The Fort Worth Convention Center to accommodate displaced guests. Just as this organization has wrapped its arms around the homeless for many years, the community in Ft. Worth, TX is now giving back to say, "we've got you!"

TPF is proud to partner with Presbyterian Night Shelter to support them as they strive to break the cycle of homelessness. You too can help! They always have needs from sunscreen to sandwiches. Simply go to-www.journeyhome.org/currentneeds to find out how you can help this organization continue to change their community.

There's a New Post on The Bottom Line!

We know that right now, actively growing your church or nonprofit can be especially difficult. However, it is during times like these that we must remain passionate and agile, as we continue to change the lives of those around us.

Our President, The Rev. Dr. Rick Young released a new blog post focused on supporting proactive growth in a reactive environment.
